Toby and Fiona are friends who have gone to school together for years. Now Toby's father, who works at a bank, has found a new job in Cardiff. So the Peterson family has to move.

Toby, who likes his home town Canterbury very much, is sad. "Canterbury has got a great football team, all my friends live here – I even like my school! I don't know what I will miss most" he says angrily. So Fiona has got an idea: she wants to have a farewell party². She invites the people who have been friends with the Petersons for years. Everybody who comes prepares something to eat which the Petersons like very much.

The evening of the party has arrived: The Petersons don't know anything about the party which is about to start any minute now. Fiona rings the bell and Mr Peterson, who looks very tired because of all the packing, opens the door. "Surprise" Fiona shouts, and all the friends who are invited, come round the corner. Mr Peterson calls his wife and children, who have been sitting in the empty living room. They can't believe it.

They now know that they will miss their friends most!
